Bochco helped develop such popular series as “Hill Street Blues,” “L.A. Law,” “Doogie Howser, M.D.” and “NYPD Blue.”

The retreat features a three-bedroom, four-bathroom main house, and a two-bedroom, two-bathroom guest house built on 47 acres in Napa Valley. In total, there is 5,600 square feet of living space, which also includes a great room, a library, patios and much more. Outdoors, there are multiple covered dining areas, a pool deck with a spa and an olive grove.

Hillary Ryan and Ginger Martin with Compass are the listing agents.

Bochco won 10 Emmy awards over his four-decade career. He and his widow used the Napa estate as an escape from Hollywood and shared it with friends and family. Bochco died in 2018.
